Introduction:

Introduction

In Affiliate Marketing, the advertiser – also called affiliate – promotes products or services, and the merchant pays the advertiser for clicks, actions, or sales that result from the advertiser’s efforts. Every time a visitor moves from the affiliate site to the merchant site to express interest in a product or make a purchase, the affiliate earns revenue. This relationship between the merchant and advertiser is called an Affiliate Program.

As an example, let’s take a look at Amazon.com. As a merchant, Amazon sells products and services. The affiliate – which might be you – promotes those products and services and directs consumers who visit his or her site to Amazon. When that happens, the affiliate earns a commission.

The third party in this type of marketing is called the affiliate network. They facilitate the relationship between the merchant and the advertiser. For merchants, the network provides a platform to manage their affiliates using multiple tools, such as conversion and commission tracking services, affiliate payment services, spam detection, and more.

For affiliates, the network provides access to merchants, reporting tools, comparison tools to help you select the most profitable programs, along with other tools to help you succeed as an affiliate.

II: Affiliate Marketing

Compensation Methods

Of course, you want to make money as an affiliate marketer. So once you've got some great tools, great hosting and plugins, and great content, compensation is obviously the next consideration.

There are several ways in which affiliate marketers are compensated by merchants, and it's important to understand each of them.

Predominant compensation methods pay only if a visitor converts into a customer by purchasing a product. 80% of affiliate programs use Cost-per-Sale to share revenue.

19% of affiliate programs use Cost-per-Action to share revenue, and the remaining 1% use Cost-per-Click and Cost-per-Mile compensation. Cost-per-Sale and Cost-per-Action compensation is performance-based.

This means that visitors have to do more than visit; they have to subscribe, complete a form, or actually make a purchase.

Diminished compensation methods, such as Cost-per-Click or Cost-per-Mile compensation are mostly used in display advertising and paid search methods. In this type of compensation, the affiliate is not concerned with the sale because their commission is earned simply by the click or mile.

Pay-per-action: Also referred to as Pay-per-lead, this method is fairly straightforward. The affiliate is paid for every visitor referred by the affiliate to the merchant website who performs the desired action, such as signing up, completing a form, etc. Many online companies use this type of compensation.

Pay-per-click: In this mode of compensation, the affiliate is paid when a visitor to their website clicks on an ad or link and visits the merchant website. The main purpose of this is to generate traffic to the merchant's website.

Click-per-impression: This is a highly popular method of compensation; however, the pay for this action is generally lower. All that the affiliate needs to do is provide space for a merchant to post ads and banners. The affiliate is paid when the ads or banners are viewed.

Pay-per-sale: As far as the “pay per” methods go, this one generates the most revenue per action. In this method, the visitor to the affiliate's website must not only go to the merchant's site, they must actually make a purchase.

Pay-per-call: In this method, the affiliate receives compensation for each phone call received from potential prospects or customers. This type of advertising is fairly new but is expected to grow.

Pay-per-install: In this model, the merchant pays the affiliate for every install of an application. These applications are usually free and are bundled with adware applications.

Here are some general instructions for applying to other affiliate networks that will increase your chances of being accepted.

Own a Domain: A domain registration generally costs about $10, and it is the best way to begin to be taken seriously by affiliate networks. Yes, there are lots of free site builders out there, but having a domain of your own legitimizes you.

Your Domain Name and Email Should Match: If you choose the right service, you will likely have an email address that goes with your domain. Take advantage of this and use that email. Again, there are lots of free email providers out there, but having a business email that coincides with your domain adds professionalism and legitimacy.

Your Website is Your Office: Because there ARE so many free or inexpensive website builders out there, there's really no excuse not to have at least a two or three page website for your business. This site should include the landing page, an "About" page, and a "Contact and Information" page. Even if you are not creative or a site-building genius, you should be able to create a simple, clean, and professional looking website.

Properly Integrated Affiliate Links: Find the professional and respectful balance between monetization and user experience. Yes, you want to make money, but visitors and potential customers these days are wary of the "hard sell." They do not want to receive emails or visit web sites where every third line has a flashing "Act Now!!" sign or link. This method, even if the company is honest, appears tacky and "scamlike" to most viewers.

Keep the majority of your high-quality content ad-free. Create some great pages to promote your offers with excellent content, and then link to those pages from your sidebar, footer, or some other high-visibility area.

Content is the Key: Let's face it, it probably isn't going to be flashing banners or promises of disappearing deals that will sell your merchant's product. It's going to be quality, engaging content that speaks to a viewer's intelligence and need or desire for the product or service. And be wary of just tossing out links for no relevant reason. Over time, that tactic will actually decrease traffic to your site, and as a result, the merchant's site.

Take Advantage of Affiliate Aggregator Service: If you blog about diverse topics, you might want to take a look at programs that automate access to affiliate programs. Let's say you are writing about a great new set of tools from Ace Hardware. Instead of signing up directly with Ace's affiliate program, you can work with an aggregator, who will automatically append the affiliate code to the link.

These programs do keep a portion of the revenue, but because they work with so many merchants, they can sometimes negotiate higher payouts or commissions. One such service is Viglink: <http://www.viglink.com/>

The screenshot shows the VigLink website interface. At the top, there is a navigation bar with links for 'HOW IT WORKS', 'PRODUCTS', 'PUBLISHERS', 'BLOG', and 'ABOUT', along with 'SIGN UP' and 'SIGN IN' buttons. The main content area features a large banner with the text 'Make money with ordinary links.' and a sub-headline 'Earn from clicks to over 35,000 sites, automatically.' Below this are 'SIGN UP' and 'HOW IT WORKS' buttons. To the right, a 'VIGLINK DASHBOARD' is displayed, showing 'Totals for All Time' (550.1K clicks, $24.7K revenue, 42.7% conversion) and 'Totals for June' ($1.7K revenue). A 'Daily Overview for June 2012' table is also visible, with columns for days of the week and rows for dates. At the bottom, a three-step process is outlined: 1. Sign Up (Simply add a snippet of), 2. Get Clicked (Link as you always have), and 3. Get Paid (When a reader buys, you).

IV: Awesome Ways to do Affiliate Marketing with a Website

There are a variety of ways that you can use your website to do affiliate marketing. Each of them have important considerations, pros, and cons. When you find the right one or more that is right for you, it will increase your chances of making money in your area of strength.

Blogging: Blogs are one of the most popular ways that affiliate marketers use websites to make money. Because it is intended to be content-driven, it is easier to strike a balance between monetizing and viewer interest.

It is also a way to connect with potential customers who share a passion for your niche. A good blogger can incorporate promotion for a product or service organically into their content, which makes it a more positive experience for the reader.

However, there are some requirements that are important for making this method successful. First, you must be able to write intelligently about the blog topic.

For example, if you have no real interest in sports, then you will probably not blog well about sporting goods or team memorabilia. Books on raising children may be in high demand, but if you have no knowledge about parenting and no children, it might not make for the best blog writing.

And speaking of writing, if you have trouble writing well, having your writing flow well in its intended language, and using correct and typical grammar and spelling, the blog may not be the best method of affiliate marketing for you.

Reviews and Recommendations: People want to know how other customers feel about a product. Even in this day and age of technology and apps, word-of-mouth is still the most effective form of advertising. Because of this, using your site to write or share recommendations, reviews, or referrals can be effective.

If you have chosen a niche for which you have a passion, chances are you have already used some of the products you are promoting. That is the perfect place to start; review the products yourself.

There are some cautions to observe when using this mode as well. Copyright infringement and plagiarism are real issues, so avoid taking others' reviews without permission. It may seem like an obvious warning, but sometimes it happens.

In addition, avoid the temptation to write "stock" reviews or pay someone to generate lots of "phantom reviews" just to get more traffic. This is actually considered black hat SEO and could get your site sanctioned.

Well-positioned Links: There are many options for link placement on your website, but some places work better than others. When you are choosing the placement for your links, keep in mind where on the page your reader will be looking. It usually works well to put text links within a blog. Above and below posts are good places for banner ads.

This is the best way for you, as an affiliate, to use ads and links to promote your products.

For example, links throughout an article that relate to the specific product or niche being discussed would be more effective than just a banner for a general landing page. If you are reviewing a gaming system in your blog, then it would make sense to include a link to Nintendo or Xbox within the text.

Vendor Guest Posts: One of the best ways to promote a product is to have the product vendor write a guest post. You can contact the vendor and ask them to write for you within the following guidelines:

- ✓ The post should be genuine, well-written, and unbiased
- ✓ Mentioning the product is fine, but the post should not be a full on advertisement or review
- ✓ Make sure the product is a good fit for your blog

Use unique pages for each product: It doesn't make sense to have one website that promotes gardening products, shoes, and graphics programs. It may save money on the front end, but it will be less likely to draw traffic and MAKE money. Have a site focused on each of the product topics/niches with which you are working.

The Free Report: No one can pass up something free, especially if it relates to a topic or niche they enjoy. Be sure to place the report at the top of your page or in a prominent place, and create auto-responder messages that will be mailed to those visitors who sign up to receive the report.

And remember, even though you are contacting them with the hopes of eventually making a sale, it takes an average of seven contacts to do this, so don't make your auto-responder message a flashing, high-pressure message.

Stay in Touch... Graciously: Once you have their contact information, try to make more than one contact. However, when you do, be sure that the content of your message is focused on how the product you are promoting can make life easier or more enjoyable.

Try to avoid the word “free,” because there are some older spam filters that will dump the message into the junk folder if it contains that type of content.

When you give them useful information periodically without jamming their inbox or sending messages that sound like sales pitches, you’ll be reminding them of the product and planting the seed in their minds that will keep them thinking about it.

The content should be focused on specific reasons to buy the product rather than a high pressure sales pitch or threats of what might happen if they pass it up.

Remember the Reality of Statistics: Generally speaking, 1 out of every 100 people will actually buy your product.

If you can generate 1,000 targeted hits, you are likely to sell 10 of the product. So as an affiliate, remember that your focus is traffic, leads, and referrals.

The more of those you can generate, the more people will visit the merchant website, and that is where the selling takes place.

V: Awesome Ways to do Affiliate Marketing without a Website

Although using a website is the most common way to do affiliate marketing, it can be done effectively without a website, at least in the beginning. It is important to keep in mind that the goal is to get your merchant's website out there for potential visitors and customers, and this can be done without a website with a bit of creativity. Here are just a few ways to do that:

Blog and Forum Posting: If you can find blogs or forums related to your niche, then an easy way to get your merchant's information out there is to post comments or create forum posts, and have the affiliate link in your signature.

Of course, you will want to be sure that the topic is actually relevant, and you have to be wary of sounding like you are simply posting to promote a product, as most forums have strict rules about proselytizing.

For example, if you are posting on a dating and relationships site, don't just post a blurb with the link. Actually become involved in discussions in a helpful way, making it more authentic.

Become a Writer: No, you don't have to be J. K. Rowling or Gordon Ramsey. However, if you know a lot about a niche or product, consider writing a free eBook or some other type of viral product. Then you make sure to insert affiliate links within the text and content.

For example, if you're selling nutritional supplements, consider writing an eBook about diet and the role of supplements in nutrition. Then you can insert your affiliate links organically. If you are a strong writer, this can be a great tool.

If not, find a budding writer who wants to promote their own work, and offer to promote their work if they will write a short eBook for you at a reduced rate.

Articles and Blogging: You don't have to have a site or a domain to have a blog. WordPress.com offers free blogging, as does Google's BlogSpot. Tumblr is also free.

Write posts and articles about your favorite topics or your niche, and include affiliate links. You can also have people subscribe by email to your blog, and this means they will be alerted every time you make a new post or write a new article.

Social Networking: Google+ and Facebook are both free, and they will both allow you to create a page as a part of your account. Set up your own social networking account, and then create a page to promote your products.

If you are worried about privacy, you can set your personal account privacy settings very high, and everyone will still be able to see your created business page.

Make posts promoting products and sharing your own experiences with the products. And when one of them makes the news, share a link to the story on your page.

Write Ads and Reviews on Classified Sites: You can use classified sites like craigslist to create ads or reviews for you affiliate products as well.

Just be sure to include the affiliate link as well. Below are a few of the sites you can use to do this:

<http://www.usfreereads.com/>

The screenshot shows the USFreeads website. At the top, there's a search bar with "Classified Ads" selected and a "Search" button. Below the search bar, there are navigation links: Home, Register, Post Ad, My Account, Help, Affiliate Program, Local Classifieds, Just Viewed, and Keyword Alerts. The main content area is titled "Free Classifieds" and includes a welcome message and a list of "Browse classified ad categories" such as Automotive, Collectibles, Home & Garden, etc. There are also sections for "What's hot on USFreeads?" and "Click here to place an ad!".

<http://epage.com/js/epmain.jsp>

The screenshot shows the EPage Classifieds website. It features a header with the EPage logo and the text "EPage® Classifieds Free Classifieds since 1994". Below the header, there are navigation buttons: "Post a FREE Ad", "Search", "Browse All Ads", and "Member Account". The main content area is divided into several sections, including "Vehicles Classifieds", "Business Opportunities", "Real Estate Classifieds", "Entertainment Classifieds", "Announcements Classifieds", "Pets & Livestock Classifieds", "Merchandise Classifieds", "Collectibles Classifieds", "Rentals Classifieds", "Foreclosures", "Services Classifieds", and "Employment Classifieds". There is also a "Place Your Free Ad" section with a list of benefits and a "Post Ad Now!" button. At the bottom, there's a promotional banner for "EPage Classifieds on your iPhone" with a "Download Now" button.

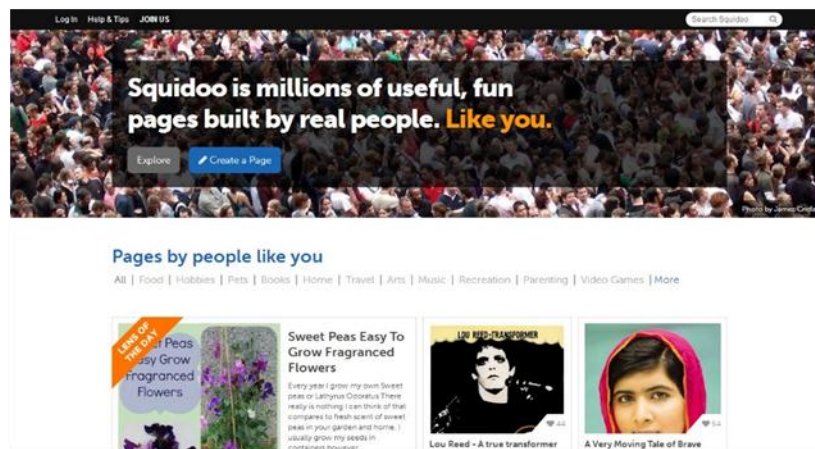

<http://www.craigslist.org/about/sites>

Sell with Squidoo: A Squidoo “lens” is essentially a mini-website that is only one page. You can use this to talk about your niche and promote your products without having to create a full site.

Because it is hosted by the Squidoo site, you don’t have to know anything about design in order to make it look sleek and professional. You can build a page about your topic and insert ads and links without having to know anything about HTML.
